Our Consular Service.

It is a well known fact that in the newspapers, our consular service in the countries south of us is in a very bad way.

A Jamaica correspondent of The Boston

Transcript writes that he saw in a town of 3,000 inhabitants, on the Caribbean sea, the American consul going day after day through the streets swearing that he would "paint the d-d town red." Our consul in the next town was a victim of the same treatment, and left his office to be managed by the agent of an English steamship company. When last heard of, the United States officers were after him. In another town the Transcript's correspondent and our consul totally ignorant of the schedule. The correspondent goes next:

Next consulate is 300 miles from this place. It is in a city of 30,000 to 35,000 people. Men are as attentive to appearance as women. The United States consul who had been there was not known away from Sweden, but Swedish

English. He controlled a big Scandinavian trade in Minnesota, and thereby "had a pull" on the member of congress of his district.

He procured his appointment by the fact that he was a native of the district.

What is very rare for an American consul family came with him. This consul did not pass the office over to any American consul, but he remained in office until he was recalled. He wanted all there was in it.

interesting question, but it is idle to talk about "reforming" the McKinley law. It should be repealed as soon as the democrats get a whack at it.

Organized Charity in Atlanta.

The invasion of Atlanta by the snow and cold has proven a blessing in many respects than one, and out of the revelations of sufferings and of charity has sprung a spirit and a movement that promise to resolve themselves into a permanent beneficence. Elsewhere will be found the story of the recent temporary relief work accomplished under the charitable auspices of the city authorities and the members of the Commercial Club, and the details of the proposed Atlanta Charitable Association, which it is proposed shall be a continuous and complete instrumentality for meeting every fitting emergency of charitable relief work in this city.

In most of the great cities of America, public charity has been in like fashion systematized, and private charities of the indiscriminate order merged into the established and orderly methods of a mutual organization. The advantages of centralizing and methodizing the relief work of a city like this are most obvious, and are sufficiently set out in the scheme now proposed to gain the endorsement of all good men and women. Out of the poverty and emergencies of life in a large community there comes forth inevitably, along with the deserving objects of charitable consideration, a motley tribe of voluntary indigents and professional pleaders for public and private alms. To investigate all cases, to relieve the honest and advertise the fraudulent, is a work that can only be accomplished through a central association and by the approved methods that have been operated by such bodies and their agents.

Atlanta needs just such an organization, and we are satisfied that to such a one as is contemplated the charitable people are ready to make their stated and liberal contributions. From the excess of offerings in the recent event there is left a surplus that will capitalize the association at the outset, and the appeal in the churches on Sunday next should result in a list of names and subscriptions that will guarantee the permanency and efficiency of the organization. Let the people of Atlanta make this movement a prompt and monumental success.

A British Tar Baby.

The New York World has long been giving a rollicking account of the misadventure of an Englishman at Cobham, Va.—an affair in which the hero was John Armstrong Chanler, the husband of Amelia Rivers Chanler.

Whether the story is true or not we cannot reach. It seems, however, that it is good enough to be true. It seems that a short time ago a young Englishman calling himself Arthur Flower March arrived at Cobham, where he began operations by claiming that he had lost his letter of credit for $2,500, and, therefore, needed temporary financial relief. He got it without any trouble and proceeded to help himself to the fat of the land.

Mr. March said that his uncle was the canon of Litchfield, and claimed that he had been educated at Harrow. He had served four years in the Royal Dublin Fusiliers, but knew nothing about military affairs. He was an intimate friend of the queen of Spain, and had a guitar which she had given him. He had lived in France, Spain, Russia and Africa, and was Lord Calthorpe's particular friend.

A fine looking young man, standing six feet in his socks, telling these yarns, soon became popular, and it was not long before he got acquainted with the lives family. Colonel Rivers investigated him, found that he was a fraud, and after offering him the chance to confess that he was a penniless adventurer, ordered him to keep off the premises. The colonel was soon called away on business and March attempted to renew relations with the family. About this time Mr. Chanler arrived. He told March to leave the neighborhood and offered to help him with a loan. March promised to go, but still lingered, and then he got into trouble. One evening Mr. Chanler invited the Englishman to accompany him to an out-house where half a dozen gentlemen were in waiting. March was then informed that his lies and frauds had been discovered and as he had refused to leave he must submit to a coat of tar and feathers. The victim was not roughly handled. Mr. Chanler simply printed on the culprit's chest, "The Way of the Transgressor is Hard," and on his back, "While Feathering My Nest Thy Feathered Me." These letters of tar were covered with feathers, and Mr. Chanler then took his tar baby on a ten-mile drive out of the county in his buggy. Chanler is a little fellow and the British weighs fully 200, but his fight ensued—the fellow was glad enough to get away with whole bones and with the sum of money which his companion generously gave him.

It is a queer story, and the queerest part of it is the fact that a little yankee like Chanler should so soon pick up the old-fashioned southern custom of tarring and feathering an objectionable character, and do the job in a manner so unique and artistic. What Mr. March will do remains to be seen. He may lecture or he may go home and write a book on America.

Southern Congressmen.

Generally, when the house is demoralized, southern members hold a majority of the chairmanships of committees.

It has been argued that this is because the south sends a majority of democratic representatives. This idea has been knocked out during the present session of congress, because in the elections of 1890 the north sent more democrats to congress than were elected in the south, and yet southern held thirty-two out of the fifty-seven chairmanships of the house committees.

The explanation given by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat is that the southern democrats have served longer than their northern associates, and their experience causes them to receive the preference in the organization of committees. Our contemporary says that the south goes farther than the rest of the country in recognizing and rewarding good representatives. It renominates good men and keeps them in office. This custom makes able men sure of several terms, and it enables them to give their whole attention to their duties, whereas in the north a representative knows that he will have a hard-fought battle at the polls, and he is strongly tempted to leave his place in the house and spend considerable time at home looking after his political interests.

The southern custom has trained up a body of statesmen, and their influence is so strongly felt in the house that they are given a majority of the chairmanships in order to expedite public business and take care of its interests. This is the secret of the whole business. When the north sends the same democratic representatives, session after session, their experience will naturally bring them into prominence on the committees.

Regulating Prices by Law.

The members of the New York legislature who are investigating the Reading coal combination are considering a very crude remedy for the evils resulting from monopoly.

Two senators on the investigating committee express the opinion that it would be constitutional for the legislature to fix the maximum price of coal. Now, if there is any one thing that is settled under our system of government, it is that the law cannot interfere in such matters in the manner suggested. Down here in Georgia, during the war, the maximum price of salt was fixed, and when it was held above that figure it was confiscated. But that was a war measure, and is in no sense a precedent for a legislature to follow in times of peace.

Suppose they regulate the price of coal in New York? The next step would be to fix the price of various articles of food. Then clothing would be added to the list. Perhaps the law would even go so far as to prescribe the subscription price of newspapers and the rates of advertising. If the legislature can control the price of coal, it can control the price of anything.

Instead of piddling with a great problem in this clumsy fashion, how is it that the New York statesmen miss the vital point of the whole business? All they have to do is to revive the old common law in reference to certain speculative monopolies which are now called trusts and combines. In this way they can smash the Reading combination and leave competition free. This would be genuine statesmanship, whereas the proposed remedy is only a piece of demagoguery.

The Short Article.

At a time when so much is said concerning the merits and the popularity of the short story, it is in order to say a word for the short newspaper article.

We are doing better in this respect than the writers of past generations, but there is room for improvement yet. Every newspaper is compelled every day to leave out really interesting communications because they are altogether too long. A loose thinker, writing carelessly, uses too many words and repeats himself unnecessarily. In these days it is the short article, symmetrical, compact and pithy, that wins.

A few years ago a famous judge in England was one of the most popular contributors to The London Times. His name was Bramwell, and his articles averaged about a third of a column. Whenever the familiar signature "B." appeared in The Times, people never failed to read the article. They knew that they would find, in the space of fifty or sixty printed lines, more clear ideas and interesting facts than they would find in two columns from another pen.

We need more Bramwells among the contributors to the daily press, and it would be a good thing for the average editor to select for publication the short article. Space is valuable in newspapers, and the time of their readers is worth something. The short article, when it covers its subject, pleases everybody, but it takes more thought, more skill in handling words and more time to get up this sort of article than an amateur would suppose.

The Constitution at Macon.

The Constitution announces with pleasure that Hon. John T. Boffeullet has been placed in charge of the Macon bureau of this paper, and that he will assume the duties of the position today.

Mr. Boffeullet needs no introduction to the readers of The Constitution or to the people of Georgia. His work for The Constitution and the other newspapers with which he has been connected has placed him in the front rank of Georgia's newspaper men, and is sufficient guarantee of the continued excellence of the service of The Constitution's Macon bureau.

France is gradually settling down. She is learning a valuable lesson by observing how quietly and calmly we deal with the great statesmen who absorbed $2,000,000 of the Panama canal funds. Everybody will deny, and then everybody will laugh and go about his business with a smiling face and light heart.

Kentucky should send a free coinage man to take Mr. Carlisle's place. However, such advice is unnecessary. All the prominent democrats of Kentucky are for free coinage.

It is not a matter for the goldolators to congratulate themselves on that John Sherman is trying to get the silver bill repealed.

The return of Wanamaker to the bargain counter will no doubt be celebrated by a torch light procession—in Washington.

The fact that Editor Richard Grubb got to Washington in spite of the weather shows what can be accomplished by a young man just from Wolf Island.

The Kansas republic ought to be an example to such republics as France. It shows what can be accomplished in a free and untrammelled republic. This far no newspaper correspondents have been escorted to the frontier.

Whenever Canada gets ready to come a-courting, we'll be ready for the hugging match. She should first learn the skin dance, however.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

A bright young fellow in Hartford started out to learn seven languages. He succeeded and then drank himself to death in plain English.

A gun that will shoot 2,000 balls a minute, worked by electricity has just been invented by Dr. Gatling. With a few more such inventions of this kind it will become so destructive that no nation will be reckless enough to engage in it.

When he was taken ill, the other day, the president's brother, John Scott Harrison, went to the house of his two relatives in Philadelphia, the Misses Sheets. He showed good health. Between two sheets is the place for a sick man.

Mrs. Catharine Sharp, who died in Philadelphia the other day, at the age of 113, remembered seeing George Washington when he was president. She saw Jefferson, Lafayette and other great men of those days, and she remembered the ridicule heaped upon Robert Fulton's steamboat. She said, in an interview, about a year ago, that Washington was not a large man, nor good looking, but that he had very pleasant ways.

After advertising several weeks, E. C. Gundry, of Chicago, Ill., succeeded in purchasing 1,500 cats. He tagged them with advertisements of his business, turned them loose, and in a few hours every town within a radius of thirty miles from Chicago was deluged with cats advertising Gundry's store.

Somebody suggests that New York hold a great international fair to commemorate the discovery of North America by John Cabot in 1497. Cabot's discovery was a great event, but it is doubtful whether such an exposition only four years later than the world's fair could be a brilliant success. Still, the matter is under consideration.

JUST FROM GEORGIA.

All Sing Together!

O. Georgia land is the land of cotton, Ham and bacon most forgotten—

Raise hogs, Raise hogs, And you'll all grow fat in Georgia.

From brick Atlanta clean to Macon County should be sick with bacon—

Raise hogs, Raise hogs, And you'll all grow fat in Georgia.

O. cotton is the country killer, Ham and bacon's heap more ill—

Raise hogs, Raise hogs, And you'll all grow fat in Georgia.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Telegram has this editorial paragraph:

"An Atlanta editor broke into the residence of a preacher a day or two ago and, among other things, stole a pair of the preacher's shoes. How shocking it would be if the detective should some time find those shoes whirling through the air of a city of saints."

But perhaps they'll strike them in a Georgia brook, keeping them to the more appropriate music of Climbing Up the Golden Stairs."

"Why He Was There."

"Didn't I tell you," said the recorder, "not to come here again?"

"To do law, judge," said the dandy, "I wouldn't a-come of a police hadn't a-fotch me."

Mr. Carpenter, recently of The Lincolnian, has been elected to the third party paper soon to be established in this town. The paper will be published by a joint stock company. The news is in no way disturbed by the fact that the paper is to be published by a joint stock company.

The Baldrige Globe is now in the stock company business under third party auspices. It has been on the third party line for some time past.

Requirements for a New Town.

A small postoffice, pond or ferry,

A grocery store to fall;

A doctor and a cemetery,

Six lawyers and a jail.

Mr. Culpepper, of Georgia, remembered here in connection with religious revivals, says he converted an editor down in Florida, and that it was one of the hardest jobs of his life.

"The truth is," said the editor, "it is very easy to convert an editor; for he is so accustomed to being converted by the church, church services, etc., that when free salvation is offered him he accepts it through force of habit."

Garway Hatridge is now editing a "personal and confidential" paper for the Savannah Press. Pleasant Stovall edits the ballot reform column. The fact is, The Press is splendidly equipped with editors.

A Georgia editor, in a brief salutatory, puts the town on notice as follows:

"All we want out of this town is a living and a funeral. We are in a position to furnish our own obituary, and are independent on the editorial side in the state."

Some excellent editorials are appearing in The Georgia Advertiser. It is one of the best edited weeklies in the state.

Too Many Like It.

"This poem is wooden," the editor said:

"Too dry—and as such it fails."

"Just as I feared," sighed the bard long-haired.

"For I made it while splitting rails."

There is very little news, if any, in the Herald, except that the editor is a man of letters.

The editor of The Tifton Gazette, The Gazette is carefully edited and every item shows up well.

A Georgia weekly of Tuesday contains this belated item:

"Ben Butler is dead. That is, we have heard that he was to be able to give our readers full particulars in our next issue. Now is the time to subscribe."

The Lynchburg, Va., News says this editorial note to the citizens of Atlanta:

HOLBROOK'S TRIAL.

It Commenced Before Judge Clark Yesterday Morning,

AND WILL BE RESUMED TODAY

The Details of the Tragedy Recalled by the Evidence—The Case Will Be Continued Tonight or in the Morning.

The trial of Parks Holbrook for the killing of George Wallraven was commenced before Judge Richard H. Clark in the criminal court yesterday morning.

It is one of the most interesting cases that will be tried at the present term of the court. The courtroom throughout the trial was crowded with spectators.

Mr. Holbrook in appearance is a very good looking man, tall and of a rather severe and dignified manner. He was accompanied by his uncle, Councilman A. L. Holbrook, and also by ex-representative Holbrook of DeKalb county.

The attorneys for Mr. Holbrook are Messrs. Dorsey, Brewster and Howell, and Judge J. A. Anderson. The state is represented by Solicitor Hill.

Selecting a Jury.

The trial did not commence until 10 o'clock and the morning session of the court was occupied in the effort to obtain a jury. This was rather difficult to do, as it always is in a criminal prosecution of such magnitude.

It was not until 3 o'clock in the afternoon that the jury was selected.

When the last man accepted the jury stood as follows: W. A. Wells, B. G. Thompson, George Bryant, C. W. Jordan, J. B. Reppert, and J. W. Morgan, J. W. McPherson, J. N. Seawright, John W. Dawson, T. L. Harding and C. H. Knox.

It is an excellent jury and one of the most intelligent bodies that could have been selected to try the case.

Testimony for the Prosecution.

Mr. Hill, as soon as the jury had entered the box, proceeded to read the bill of indictment.

The tragedy occurred on the 26th of October, 1932. The scene of the difficulty was several miles to the north of the city and near the village of Buchanan.

The place in which the trouble began was the store of Mr. C. H. Trimble. Mr. Wallraven was in the store when Mr. Holbrook entered. An old feud had existed between them for quite a while, and as soon as they met they began to exchange hostile glances.

Finally Holbrook went out and returned, when the difficulty was renewed. In the fight which ensued on the outside of the building Mr. Wallraven was shot in the center of the body and fell to the ground.

The details of the occurrence are given more fully in the language of the witnesses who testified in regard to the killing.

Dr. Tally on the Stand.

The first witness to testify in the case was Dr. A. T. Tally. He was a member of the coroner's jury that had come to the killing at the time of the occurrence.

He testified that Wallraven had come to his death by reason of a bullet wound in his back, and that he had been in the opinion was either a 40 or a 44 caliber.

Mr. Staples Introduced.

A material witness for the prosecution was Mr. P. H. Staples.

He stated that he was a farmer, and lived in DeKalb county about four miles from Buchanan. He was in the store of C. H. Trimble on the night of the shooting.

Wallraven was also present. In a few minutes Mr. Parks Holbrook entered the store, and the former, recognizing him, said that he had been looking for him.

He then pulled out a pistol and fired five times on the head. They came together and Wallraven soon had Holbrook by the throat.

Wallraven then handed his pistol to Mr. Henderson, one of the witnesses, and pursued him without further difficulty at that time. Finally Mr. Henderson returned the pistol to Wallraven on the solemn condition that he would go about his business.

Henderson followed him, however, and kept his hands on his person. He fired his pistol, nevertheless, and the shot was returned by Holbrook, who was standing in the direction of the store. They came within sixty feet of each other and proceeded to discharge their cartridges.

Henderson and the witness ran to the store and by the time they reached the spot the firing commenced again. Then it was that Wallraven fell, exclaiming as he fell, "I am shot in the back."

That was all that the witness knew of the difficulty.

Mr. Henderson's Views.

Mr. Walter Henderson was then placed on the stand. His testimony was in the main corroborative of that of Mr. Staples.

He testified in addition that Mr. Wallraven at the time of the difficulty had two pistols. He was taken when the light occurred, and had taken one of them from Wallraven, giving it back to him on the promise that he would not use it. He had followed Wallraven out of the store and had tried to dissuade him from having any further trouble.

Mr. Tom Johnson Testifies.

The next witness who testified was Mr. Tom Johnson. He had just hauled a lot of meat to the store and had stacked it up on the front entrance of the building.

He was standing in the door when Mr. Holbrook entered. He saw him go out again with his wagon and get a pistol from it. He returned the pistol with the pistol in his hand behind him.

He heard few words pass from the lips of Holbrook, though he couldn't distinguish what they were, and then the reply came from Wallraven, "It's a d—n lie."

Holbrook then proceeded to pound the other man over the head with his pistol. Parties interfered with the further progress of the fight. Wallraven was led out of the back door of the building, and the shot was carried out of the front door. Wallraven, however, climbed over the back fence, immediately followed by Mr. Henderson.

He discharged his pistol over Mr. Henderson's head. Then he pulled away and the difficulty ensued.

Mr. Johnson was the last witness who testified. After he took his seat the court adjourned until this morning at 9 o'clock.

The funeral of Mr. William H. Cadie, the conductor who was killed a few days ago in Athens, occurred from his late residence on Luckie street yesterday afternoon.

It was largely attended by his friends.

GORDON AND COLQUITT.

Reports Being Sent Out from Washington That They Do Not Agree.

Several newspapers contain reports from Washington that the impression exists that Senators Colquitt and Gordon have disagreed about the Georgia patronage under the new democratic administration, and that the feeling existing between them is not of the warmest nature.

The Columbus Enquirer-Sun publishes a special from "E. P. S." from which is taken the following:

A gentleman from our state, at present a visitor here, says that Gordon is highly soured against Colquitt for reason that the senator gave him no encouragement in his race against Calhoun, but I think that this report had better be received with a grain of allowance, as Colquitt had nothing in common with Calhoun.

GORDON AND COLQUITT.

Reports Being Sent Out from Washington That They Do Not Agree.

Several newspapers contain reports from Washington that the impression exists that Senators Colquitt and Gordon have disagreed about the Georgia patronage under the new democratic administration, and that the feeling existing between them is not of the warmest nature.

The Columbus Enquirer-Sun publishes a special from "E. P. S." from which is taken the following:

A gentleman from our state, at present a visitor here, says that Gordon is highly soured against Colquitt for reason that the senator gave him no encouragement in his race against Calhoun, but I think that this report had better be received with a grain of allowance, as Colquitt had nothing in common with Calhoun.

Is it well

With Your Kidneys

Do you appreciate the constant duties performed by the kidneys, yet fewer appreciate how easily these important organs are damaged?

An important function of the kidneys is to eliminate urea, uric acid and other waste products which so quickly poison the whole system if left to course through the blood.

When the kidneys become diseased and fail to discharge their important functions, the skin, liver, bowels and lungs undertake the work of elimination - a work these organs are unfitted to perform.

It is readily understood that with this unnatural condition of things the whole body will soon become diseased, and death, alas! will too often follow.

"Keep the kidneys in good tone and you will preserve your health" is a motto worth remembering.

Stuart's Gin and Buchu is a true kidney tonic. Quickly taken up by the blood and filtered out by the little kidney tubes, it is consequently directly applied to the affected spots. Sold by all druggists.

HE STOLE A CHECK.

An Eleven-Year-Old Boy Gets Into Trouble.

SAID HIS GRANDMOTHER WAS DYING

And Begged to Be Turned Out - His Touching Appeal to Be Allowed to See His Old Grandmother.

A fair-faced, blue-eyed, bright-looking boy, who says he is only eleven years old, and whose appearance indicates that he is telling the truth, stood in cell No. 7 at police headquarters last night in the midst of a half dozen noisy prisoners of the worst type.

Great tears dropped down the youth's cheeks and an expression of hopeless distress overspread his features. He wept as only a tender-hearted youth can weep when first overtaken in wrongdoing, and who first catches a glimpse of the black side of life.

The prisoners gazed him without mercy. They laughed at his tears, mocked him and cursed him for his whimpering, called him a tenderfoot; and when at last too tired to abuse him longer, they sank to sleep on the floor, he sat disconsolately in one corner of the cell and gave full vent to his tears.

"Oh, please, sir, let me out," he begged in a heartbroken way; "let me out. I want to see grandmamma before she dies. She's been sick for a long time, and I know she wants me. I must see her; can't I stay here all night. She may die tonight! Oh—"

He broke into hysterical weeping. He would have said nothing that did not involve his release so that he might see his beloved grandmother, whose pet he is. The youthful prisoner was Walter Manning, son of Lester Manning, a fireman on the Western and Atlantic railroad. The boy's father lives on Corbett street, and the grandmother lives with them. According to the boy's story she has been expected to die for several weeks, and the fear that she would die while he was in prison almost drove the youth wild. He is a bright youth, and one week ago he went to work for the Atlanta Engraving Company as office boy. Yesterday morning he was left alone in the office, and during that time a gentleman went to the office and left a check for $8 on the table. The boy inspected the check, and after doing so pocketed it. He was too afraid to carry it to the bank to have it cashed, but went to a store and made a slight purchase, giving the check in payment. He had no money in his pocket, and the police station was discovered in a few minutes and Detective Grim was called in. He arrested Manning and carried him to the police station. No money could be found in the boy's pockets, and the detective was on the point of releasing him when he discovered the money hidden in the lining of the boy's coat. Manning then confessed all and was locked up. He begged all night to be released and kept crying about his grandmother.

Turned Over by His Bondsmen.

Mr. Wm. Stockton, who has been under bond for two weeks on the charge of cheating and swindling, was yesterday surrendered to Sheriff Barnum by his bondsmen, P. Buckalew and J. H. Spillman.

Stockton is one of the best known young men in Atlanta, having for a long time been connected with a leading insurance firm.

Two days ago his bondsmen became nervous about his bond and notified the police to arrest Mr. Stockton. He was not found by the officers, and yesterday morning Mr. Spillman and Mr. Buckalew found him on Broad street. They carried him to the sheriff. The case will likely be settled. It was said yesterday that other cases had been discovered, but if such is true they will not be pushed.

Announcement

Extraordinary!

Dr. Hathaway & Co., the eminent specialists who are now acknowledged as the leading and most successful of the United States in their line, beg to announce to the public that they have opened elegant offices in the new Innan building, 22 1/2 South Broad street, rooms 34 and 35, this city, where they are prepared to give the latest and most scientific treatment in all diseases peculiar to MEN AND WOMEN, CATARRH, PRIVATE SKIN AND BLOOD DISEASES. The reputation that Dr. Hathaway & Co. have throughout the United States is a positive GUARANTEE that all people who place themselves under their treatment will be sure of prompt, safe and satisfactory results. Not only that, but at moderate price. The field of medicine and surgery is too broad for one person to give the study and proper treatment for every disease, therefore specialists are demanded, and Dr. Hathaway & Co. believe that Diseases Peculiar to Men and Women - Private Skin and Blood Diseases - is a specialty by itself and needs the same careful study and experience that the eye, ear, nose and throat do, or other well known specialties. Dr. Hathaway & Co. have had years of experience and have let no opportunity escape to obtain the latest instruments and study the new discoveries in medical science pertaining to their specialty. They are here, believing that the people of this city and vicinity will appreciate the opening of such offices and give us the share of their patronage. We, on our part, will guarantee such results as are obtainable from our treatment will not be disappointing.

OUR SKILL CANNOT BE QUESTIONED. SKILL AND HONESTY IS OUR MOTTO.

We will let our patients be the judges. Remember, we and our graduates hold diplomas from some of the best medical colleges in America, and our office is in the prominent location of Atlanta. Consultation is free. You are earnestly invited to visit our office, and you will not be urged to take treatment unless you so desire.

FAMOUS TROUSER SALE.

Stupidity in this column?

No, never. We have so much quiet enjoyment at the expense of the self-complacency shown in the dull verbosity of many advertisements that we prefer not to flock with the dreary. Not stupid, but earnest. It is with utter gravity that we tell the following about Two Thousand Pair of Trousers. It is not humor or satire. It is sober fact.

The Trousers are all new, a special manufacturing effort consummated this season. The snow and cold delayed them, and the best days are lost. Salesmen and customers have alike been chafing at the unexpected restraint. But here they are:

TROUSERS AT $2.90.

TROUSERS AT $3.90.

TROUSERS AT $4.90.

TROUSERS AT $5.90.

TROUSERS AT $6.90.

NO MERCY SHOWN FOR PRICE OR PEDIGREE.

A sharp cut throughout them all. The foregoing items embrace splendid Trousers well worth, at least, 40 per cent more than the quotations affixed.

Popular patterns, fashionable colors, exquisite styles and made like models.

See the sample array in windows. You may get a fractional idea of their excellence and attractiveness.
